A human scholar, formerly a professor at the Zorya Academy in Baku. He claims to study "cosmology", the origin and development of the universe. He's very tall and lean, dressed all in black, with bronze skin, black hair, and a big nose. Looks like an Egyptian Adrien Brody. He's charming in the nutty professor kind of way. When he arrived at Castle Rend, he carried an large overstuffed backpack filled with strange looking instruments of glass and metal.

He calculated where one fragment of a shooting star landed, and asked Genesis Gambit for help retrieving it.
